rooms enjoyed by
the great and the good.

To say The Midland has history is somewhat of an understatement. Over the years this iconic Grade II listed hotel has welcomed kings, presidents and rock stars. It's where Charles Stewart Rolls first met Frederick Henry Royce, where Posh and Becks had their first dinner date and where you, if you choose to honour us with your presence, will be treated like royalty too.

feet from the lift
to the city.

Take one step outside the door of The Midland hotel and you're in the heart of the city. With all of its many delights and distractions. Such as superb shopping, a rich and varied nightlife and a cultural scene that's positively thriving. And if you're new in town, don't worry, we'll be happy to point you in all the right directions.

seconds savouring
each and every mouthful.

When you're dining in a restaurant that has not one, but two AA Rosettes, the last thing you want to do is hurry. Which is fine by us, because at The French, our famous Anglo-French restaurant, relaxed refinement is the order of the day. If you fancy something a little less formal, but equally ambrosial, try a snack in our unique Octagon Lounge.

With so many ways to be healthy, it's easy to get carried away at The Midland. A fully-equipped gymnasium with on-site fitness instructors, a swimming pool, sauna, aerobic classes, squash courts, even a salon to keep your hair healthy too. And when you're all worked out, where better to have a lie down than in one of our spacious and sumptuous bedrooms.

best seats in the house.

As you'd expect from such a grand and majestic hotel, events at The Midland can take on epic proportions. Our Alexandra Suite, for example, can seat up to 700 conference delegates. Or up to 750 for a cocktail reception. And we're equally adept at organising small, intimate gatherings. Whatever your event, our dedicated Event Planners will make sure it's one to remember.

One of a kind.

The Midland is an integral part of Manchester's history. Even the land on which it is built is the site of the infamous 1819 Battle of Peterloo, when cavalry charged a crowd of nearly 100,000 people protesting for universal suffrage. Originally an exclusive hang out for the wealthy cotton merchants about town, this uniquely glamorous hotel continues to charm the cotton socks off the modern day Captains of Industry. But you don't have to be here on business to experience The Midland. The fine food, luxurious bedrooms, opulent décor, impeccable service and architectural splendour are reason enough to justify a stay. And you can take advantage of all we have to offer secure in the knowledge that everything we do at QHotels ensures a positive approach to our staff, our community and the environment.
